Hearts Gate

There were so many ways to spend the day, she thought.

She could spend the day walking barefoot on the hardwood floors of her apartment, moving through the light coming from the window and keeping good company with the warm breeze filtering with her curtains.

Or she could boil some water and make orange and almond tea, sticking herself in a corner and reading pages of a book she had abandoned, reconnecting with old friends while the steam from her cup kissed her lips playfully.

Or maybe she could head outside, venture into the world that usually overwhelmed her. Get lost in its winding roads that traced the earth like ridges, winding so far ahead that she couldn't guess where they were trying to lead her.

Maybe she could sit underneath the Spring sky, where the air outside left her cheeks rosy with color. The type of air that wove poems out of breezes and brought affection down from a sun still hiding behind temperamental clouds. The type of air that better persuaded those that dreamed inside their heads, to stay there.

There were so many ways to spend the day.

Curtains

Sometimes I like to sit on borders and, with the promise of a dog eared book, watch the scenes of people's lives play out in front of me.

The curtains open.

They stand at a casual nod, with eyes following a stirring tea, he puts his hands in his pockets, and promises to call later. But his eyes say it all.

I already miss you. I already miss you a lot.

-Amor M

I like the darkness of the night sky, stars spelling this way and that as if they were arranged there a place I like the way good matters ends I like the way laughter always spills That's the world for it It seems just colors in light I like the moon light Again and again and again and again and again and again and again and again I like the quiet sound a coffee cup makes when it's set down on a wooden table So husband So morning Like morning light streaming through the window and filtering out onto the kitchen floor I like the way girl's lips look like they've smiled with berries I like the way morning light breaks like a prism through the empty room border on one dirty apartment floor Glasses empty except for the sunlight hour I like the way blueberries stain my fingers during the summer I like the way light hits your eyes and turns it into a color that doesn't exist anywhere else other than in this moment I want a girl I want the honey to call my name as a croaker down my street looking for me I want to feel your underwear on my feet and I want to feel the sun kiss freckles onto my cheeks I want to know you will hold on you make you very much me, and goodbye as you go
That's just a little bit about me
